Ask a Radiation Oncologist: Common questions about radiotherapy in the treatment of cancer

This Q&A session was part of a workshop run by the Advanced Breast Cancer Group in May 2010 in Brisbane. While it was for women with secondary breast cancer, we think it may also benefit people with other types of cancer.

Dr Robyn Cheuk, Senior Radiation Oncologist, Royal Brisbane and Women's Hospital answers such questions as: Is a single large dose as good as multiple small doses? Is it possible to have radiation more than once on the same site? How effective is it for treating cancer and for pain relief?

This film was produced by the Advanced Breast Cancer Group in collaboration with Ground Floor Pictures and funded by Queensland Health.
