You're Not Alone

a film about living with secondary breast cancer

This is a story about the experiences of three women, living with secondary breast cancer. They talk about what it was like when they were first diagnosed with this life threatening illness, and their journey into uncharted territory as they learned to cope, with the support of their family, friends and other women in a professionally led support group.

This film was produced by the Advanced Breast Cancer Group (Brisbane, Australia) in collaboration with the Griffith Film School, Griffith University and funded by Queensland Health. It was developed as a resource for women diagnosed with secondary breast cancer, their partners and families and for health professionals involved in their care.
